I'm Vincent Orback, a freelancing web designer and front-end developer from Stockholm, Sweden.

I have an interest in both design and technology which makes for a great combination when working as a web designer. After studying system development and computer science I quickly moved towards the web to work more with design and user experiences. Since then I've worked at different agencies but right now I'm freelancing again, making websites for people, organizations and companies that I like, around the world.

When I'm not working with clients I like to work on side projects and open-source tools to keep me up to date with new tech and possibilities.
